

It's Cascadia Culture Week!

May 17th - May 26th

"We celebrate Cascadia Culture Week to remind ourselves of distinct regional values, unique traditions, inherent beliefs, and our devotion to creating a sustainable and equitable community in which leadership is in the hands of the people and a strong community in our greatest asset."

Why Cascadia Culture Week?

Cascadia has a dynamic and distinct culture that should be seen and celebrated. Culture Week provides a platform to inform and educate ourselves and others about our bioregion, and to focus on the shared needs and desires of our community. It's a time for reading, reflecting and collecting the stories of our past so we can influence the direction of our future.

Cascadia is about community and the strength that comes from interdependence. At the core of bioregionalism is the principle that all living things here rely on the same watersheds to survive. Cascadia Culture Week is the perfect time to get your collective together at work, school or home and discuss ways you can better assist each other, our bioregion and the earth.
